FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The ACVIM Announces Advanced Clinical Training Fellowship Recipients

Greenwood Village, Colo. (April 13, 2021) The American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine (ACVIM) is pleased to announce two (2) Advanced Clinical Training Fellowships were awarded in 2020.

ACVIM Advanced Clinical Training Fellowships are designed to provide salary support for training opportunities for Fellows committed to a veterinary clinical career. The ACVIM provides support of up to $25,000 per opportunity with matching funding from an academic institutional partner for at least one year. Fostering the professional development of clinician scientists who will advance the animal health in the internal medicine disciplines is made possible by the support of ACVIM fellowship training opportunities.

Award recipient Dr. Lisa Edwards shares appreciation for the chance to collectively cultivate clinical science in multiple areas, “The proficiency gained in these areas will enhance my training as an internist and allow me to provide the highest-level care to patients and to explore new heights in large animal internal medicine.”

Specifically available to ACVIM Diplomates or candidates that have completed residency-training programs within the last two years and wish to pursue an advanced training program for a minimum of one year. The opportunities are awarded once a year with proposals being granted to the supporting academic institution.

Congratulations to the following individual and institutional award recipients:
